

Investing in Maine's clean energy future

Central Maine Power (CMP), a member of the Avangrid family, serves approximately 660,000 customers across 346 communities in central and southern Maine. With a commitment to serving our customers, we are investing in a stronger, smarter, and cleaner electric grid for all Mainers.

Our service area

CMP's 11,000-square-mile service area is larger than the states of Massachusetts and Rhode Island combined. It contains about 78% of Maine's population and major commercial and manufacturing centers.

We trace our origins to November 7, 1899, when founding partners, attorney Harvey Eaton and engineer Walter Wyman, bought a hydroelectric generator providing street lighting and service to about 100 customers in the village of Oakland, Maine. They soon began a long program of expanding their service area through interconnection and acquisitions, and began using the name Central Maine Power in 1910.

Since its founding, CMP has delivered billion kilowatt-hours of electricity to more 650,000 homes and businesses across Maine.
